THE JUST REWARD OF VILLAINY.

FROM THE CHARLESTON CITY GAZETTE.

"Though hand join in hand the wicked shall not go unpunished."—Holy Bible.

THE CONFESSION OF RICHARD FRANCIS.

At the Court of General Sessions for Barnwell District, Fall Term, 1816, Richard Francis was convicted of horse stealing, and was executed on the 21st December following.

For some time after his conviction he appeared to regard his approaching fate with the most perfect indifference, arising, it was supposed, from a hope that he would be pardoned by the governor. About a week before his execution, he desired to see Mr. Trotti, the Sheriff of the District, of whom he enquired whether there was any reason to hope for a pardon—being answered in the negative, he wept bitterly, and from that time till his execution, he continued to pray almost incessantly, and apparently with much fervor. On the day preceding his execution, he sent again for Mr. Trotti, whom he informed that he wished to make a confession of the crimes of which he had been guilty; adding, that by so doing he could, he thought, die with more resignation. Paper and ink being procured, and another gentleman called in, he related as follows—

That he was about 32 years of age, the son of Richard and Mary Francis, and was born in N. Carolina, from which state his parents removed to S. Carolina, soon after his birth. His youth was spent in idleness, ignorance, folly and vice. The first crime of magnitude of which he was guilty, was the stealing of a horse of his uncle Jourdan Harrel, near Kingstree, for which he was apprehended, tried and convicted, but was pardoned by Governor Alston, on condition that he would enlist in the naval service—that he was accordingly conducted on board the gun boat cutter Boxer, stationed at Georgetown, under the command of capt. Mork, where he remained about a year; that in company with two other sailors, he deserted and came to Island creek, in Colleton District, where he had some friends and relations; and where he remained, until hearing that he was advertised as a deserter—that he then directed his course towards Florida, in company with Isaac Souls, his wife's uncle; that in passing through Bryan county (Georgia) they came across a man lying drunk & asleep, on Jenk's Bridge, over Black or Mill creek, they threw the man from the bridge into the water, and took along with them his horse, which was feeding at a little distance off. The water under the bridge did not appear to be over a foot deep, but the space between it and the top of the bridge was between 20 and 25 feet, and the bottom was covered with logs and rubbish. They heard the man reach the water, and struggle, but what become of him afterwards, they never understood. On the Altamaha river, he fell in company with one Thomas Jones, with whom he engaged in the commission of theft, robbery and villainy of every description: that during the time he was with Jones, which was about 18 months, they robbed many persons and houses of money, watches and clothes—stole ten horses and three negroes, all of which they sold to the Spaniards in East Florida. One of the negroes who belonged, as he said, to Mr. Beck, they stole from Beck's Ferry, on the Savanna river; the other two from James Caswell, in Tatnell county, Georgia: that while in co-partnership with Jones, he stole, on his own account, a horse from Mrs. Harvey, of Cullock county; that himself, Jones and one Lewis Randall, an associate of theirs, met at St. Mary's with a man of the name of Johnson, and two others of the name of Williamson—after spending some time in drinking and gambling together, a quarrel arose between the two parties: Johnson threatening to inform against them, they drove off the two Williamsons with clubs, knocked Johnson down, threw him into the river, and escaped into Florida—from thence they went into the Creek Nation and were some time employed in stealing cattle and horses from the Indians, which they disposed of in Georgia. While in this employment, they killed two Indians, and one of their party was shot through the arm with a rifle ball.

That afterwards he engaged as a substitute in the Georgia militia, and having served two months at Savanna, he deserted with a view of enlisting in the U. States service. With that intention, in going to Montgomery in company with a sergeant of Lieut. Turpin's he got possession of the sergeant's horse, saddle, bridle and pistols, and making of to Sumpter District, S. C. sold the horse, &c. to one Charles Richardson, for $70—that on the Four Holes, he stole a mare from an unknown person, which he exchanged in Barnwell District; and stole a horse at the 45 Mile House on the road leading from Charleston to Columbia, which a few days afterwards, near Givhan's Ferry, he exchanged with a waggoner for another horse—that near Hudson's Ferry, on the Savanna river, he engaged to work for a man, and going to Savanna on a raft of his employer, he left the raft at Ebenezer, returned, and stole his employer's horse: came to South Carolina, was apprehended and committed to jail at Coosawatchie, from whence he was discharged in consequence of the prosecutor's not appearing. He then stole a stock cattle in Colleton District, which he sold at Slann's Bridge, and for which he was committed to jail in Jacksonborough. While there, hearing that he was to be prosecuted by James Mallard, for horse stealing, he broke jail, escaped, and stole a mare, colt, saddle and bridle, from the plantation of a Mr. Lemax, on the Round O, which he sold on Briar Creek, in Georgia, and went to Florida. Being there furnished by Thomas Jones and Lewis Randall, with two horses, he returned to Georgia to sell them, but being closely pursued by some Spaniards, he was forced to leave one of the horses at the St. Mary's; the other he left with Jacob Carter and Henry Branch, on the Ahamaha, to sell. That at Riceborough, he stole a horse which he sold in Jacksonborough, (Georgia)—he then came to Carolina, and on the 4th of August, 1816, in the company of a friend (whom he declined naming) approached the village of Barnwell; he remained in sight of the village, holding the horses on which they rode, while his friend stole the horse for which he was about to die. He was informed that the mare which Mallard charged him with stealing, was one which he had exchanged with a Mr. Loper. If so, he observed, that he did not steal her, but received her in exchange for a horse; with a knowledge, however, that she had been stolen—That he had many secret friends dispersed thro' the country, between Sumpter District and the St. Mary's; that they had never before forsaken him in adversity; but that since his last confinement, he had not heard from any of them, and did not believe that they had made any attempt to assist him; but those he called his friends, had imposed on him; keeping him between them and the halter, they privately countenanced and encouraged him, and profited by his villiany, while he was miserably destitute of food and clothing; that he had been four times married, and had two wives then living, one in Sumpter District, and the other in Bullock county, Georgia.

To bad company and his own ignorance, he ascribed the depravity of his mind. He had often experienced compunctions of conscience, but believing his situation desperate, both in this world and the next, these sensations served only to impel him with greater rapidity in his vicious career.

He was much agitated while making the above statement; but on concluding, grew more calm. A minute or two afterwards, however, his discomposure of mind returned with greater violence. His whole frame became suddenly convulsed: his countenance evincing the greatest mental agony. Becoming a little more composed, he observed that he had omitted the most atrocious act of his life, not intentionally, for his wish was to disclose every thing he could recollect. He then made several attempts to proceed, but was unable—the power of utterance had entirely forsaken him. His agitation measurably subsiding, he desired that he might be attended on the next morning, when he would conclude his confession.

In the morning his appearance was much more composed. He observed, that during the night, he had conversed with the other prisoners on the subject that lay so heavy on his mind the preceding evening, which had given him great relief. He then said, that after deserting from the cutter Boxer, as stated above, one of the sailors who deserted at the same time, (whose name was Murrell) and himself, came to Charleston, where they remained about two weeks—while there, Murrell observed that he knew a man by the name of Blake, a ship carpenter by trade, who had money, of which he proposed that they should rob him. After some enquiry, they discovered where Blake lodged, entered his bed chamber at a late hour of the night, found him alone with a candle burning; seized him by the throat, by choaking prevented him from crying out, and demanding his money, he pointed to a small trunk, which together with the unfortunate owner, they carried into the street, where they choaked the man to death, and after taking a gold watch from his pocket, they raised a grate and deposited the body in one of the drains of the town. In the trunk they found two hundred and forty dollars in money. Francis then made off for Island Creek, as related above. Murrell spoke of Blake as a person with whom he was acquainted, and Francis believed them both to be from the northward.

He was attended by the clergyman at the gallows, and prayed with much earnestness. As the Sheriff struck the board from under his feet, he exclaimed sufficiently loud to be heard by several of the bye-standers, though apparently addressing himself, "W W is the man who stole the horse! W W, of Beaufort District, is the man who brought me into all my troubles! The Lord have mercy on us! The Lord have mercy on us!"

FOREIGN ARTICLES.

Late German papers state that Prussia, Holland, Switzerland, Hesse Cassel, Bavaria, Wirtemberg, and some other small German Courts, have made demands on France for the restitution of sums extorted from them by Bonaparte, chiefly under the name of loans, to the amount of sixty millions sterling.

The Emperor Alexander has issued a rescript in favor of the sect of dissenters from the Greek Church. It forbids all further persecution of this sect, and observes. "Does it become a Christian Government to employ harsh and cruel means, to torture and exile, to bring back into the church those who have gone astray? The doctrine of the Redeemer, who came into the world to save the sinner, cannot be spread by restraint and punishment.—True faith can only take root, with the blessing of God, by conviction, instruction, mildness, and, above all, by good example,"

The Duke of Northumberland's Coffin.—The inside coffin is lined with rich white satin & the dress of the same, trimmed with fine point lace, &c. The outside case made of English oak, covered with rich crimson Genoa velvet, and finished in the handsomest manner, with stars of the Order of the Garter, coronets and every appropriate decoration. On the plate are the arms & supporters, with the following inscription engraved:—

The most High, Puissant and Most Noble
PRINCE HUGH PERCY,
Duke and Earl of Northumberland, Earl and Baron Percy, Baron Lucy Poynings, Fitzpayne, Bryan, Latimer, and Warkworth, and Baronet, Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rutulorum of the county of Northumberland, and town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Vice Admiral of the same and the Maratime parts thereof, and Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter.

Died on the 10th day of July, 1817.
In the 75th year of his age.

The Cavalcade will move from Northumberland-house to morrow at 12 o'clock.

Some idea may be formed of the importance of even the business of making Shoe Blacking in London, from the fact that on a late legal investigation, one manufacturer was found to have in his possession eight thousand five hundred gallons of acid liquid, forming one of the ingredients in the composition he prepared and sold.

JOHN WINRIGHT, late a teacher in one of the academies of Baltimore, acquaints his friends and the citizens of Pittsburgh, that he will on Monday next, the 8th inst. open at the old established school room over Dr. Armstrong, (occupied for many years by Mr. Lowrie, Christy &c.) a DAY SCHOOL for the youth of both sexes—where will be taught the various branches of an English education on the following terms:

DINNER TO GEN. BROWN.

On Wednesday last, a public dinner was ...ven by the citizens of this place, to Maj. ...en. Jacob Brown. James Ross, Esq. Pres...ent, assisted by Dr. George Stevenson, ...ice President. About a hundred persons ...ttended: Numerous appropriate and pa...triotic toasts were drank. We regret that ...our limits do dot permit us to insert them ...in our paper of this day.

PUBLIC MEETING.

The citizens of Pittsburgh and its vicin...ity, who are favourable to the election of ...JOSEPH HEISTER, and an independent ...county nomination, are requested to meet ...on Saturday evening the 13th inst. at half ...past six o'clock, at the house of John M'...Clintock, for the purpose of adopting meas...ures respecting the ensuing election.

HENRY BALDWIN,
JAMES LEA,
JOHN SPEAR,
SILAS ENGLES,

THOMAS BAIRD,
GEORGE BOGGS,
JOHN OSBORNE,
JOHN W. TREMBLY,
PETER BEARD,
A. M. BOLTON,
A. BRACKENRIDGE,

Republican Committee of Correspondence for Alleghe ny County.

...By accounts from the Eastern counties, we learn ...that there is but little doubt of there being large ...majorities for Gen. Heister, on the other side of ...the mountains. The trial between Kline and Pea...rce, has had an effect, which no argument and ...no comparison would have produced—the solemn ...verdict of arbitrators, deciding upon evidence, and ...upon oath cannot be answered, and those who wa...nted before are decided now. The western peo...ple would do well to read that trial.

Why—if Gen. Heister is so stupid and so bad a ...man as the new school democrats say he is, have ...they kept him in office for the last twenty years? ...These gentlemen are very consistent, truly!

The New-York Columbian states, that a ...mutiny has taken place amongst the Cadets ...at West-Point, of which Captain Pattridge ...is said to have been the promoter. Major ...Thayer, the superintendent, was deprived ...of command by force.

New-York, Sept. 2.

HORRID WORK.

On Wednesday last, a duel was fought ...at Hoboken.—On Sunday another—and on ...Monday another! Shortly after the third ...duel, some persons attracted by the noise ...of the pistols went to the fatal spot, ...where they found the body of a man about ...30 years of age! A ball had entered his ...left shoulder. On the corpse was found ...written on a piece of paper with a pencil, ...Gibbs, Esquire ! ! !

In one paper opposed to the election of ...General Heister, we noticed that he was as...serted as the vilest of all debased men; he ...was branded as a TORY; and

"To damn him most supremely,"

...his name was associated with that of the in...famous Arnold.

In another paper, opposed to the election ...of Mr. Findlay, we observed that he was ...attacked by the epithet of "old bare legs!" ...in allusion to his having formerly been ...seen without shoes or stockings.

We are disgusted with the malignity and ...folly of this species of warfare. It is de...grading to the Press—It is dishonorable to ...a Republick.

Cannot we differ in opinion—and differ ...like gentlemen? The whole force of argu...ment may be brought, like the battering ...rams of ancient days, or the artillery of the ...present, to bear against the citadel of our ...opponents. The arrows of wit and the ...darts of ridicule, may still be pointed. ...Every legitimate weapon of warfare may ...be used——Why then should we descend ...to use the stink-pots of blackguardism, or ...the poisoned missiles of falsehood?

A time did exist, when the American ...press was admired for its purity, and res...pected for its integrity.——That a thing ...was published in the newspaper, was e...nough to stamp its authenticity. The press ...strengthened our patriotism——animated in ...our breast the love of liberty and of virtue ...—kindled the warmest glow of affection ...for those just and brave men, who had ...united us in the anxious consultations of ...the council, and in the perils of the field—...and it aroused our heroes to the battle. In ...the manner it is now conducted, its char...acter and influence are rapidly declining. ...Every printer owes it to his reputation, ...and to the liberal profession to which he ...belongs, steadily, and firmly to resist the ...growing corruption and depravity of the ...press. Men of all parties are interested ...to preserve it pure and uncontaminated. ...Our newspapers give tone to public senti...ment and morals. While they are preser...ved pure, our liberties will be safe.—If the ...public sentiment is perverted, and the pub...lic morals corrupted, whatever forms may ...remain, your government will become des...potic, and your liberties be lost forever.

FETE CHAMPETRE.

On Monday evening the 25th instant a magnificent ball was given by his Excellency Hyde de Neuville, the French ambassadour, at his seat near Brunswick, N. Jersey in honour of the birth day of the King.

The company consisted of about three hundred ladies and gentlemen, and the toute ensemble was highly imposing. The evening was hailed by a prodigal display of elegant fire works and at intervals they were continued with great brilliancy.—About nine o'clock the dancing commenced in a suite of rooms on the lower floor, and continued until 12 o'clock when the supper table was graced by 150 ladies, comprising the belles of the provincial towns of West Jersey, and many of the accomplished ladies of New York.

On the top of the Mansion House the Fleur de lis, was conspicuous by the blaze of light emitted from the innumerable lamps which surrounded it. The extensive grounds about the house were tastefully illuminated and nothing that could contribute to give elegance or pleasure to the scene was omitted.

Among the distinguished guests that honoured the minister and his lady with their company were the governor of N. Jersey and lady—the Russian, Portuguese and Spanish Ambassadors—the French consul general and Mr. Le Forrest and lady, the consul for Baltimore,

The fascination of the whole was increased by the serenity of the weather, and the polished refinement of the host and hostess gave a brilliancy to the entertainment that cannot be described.

The 17th of June was observed in Jamaica, as a day of general fasting and prayer in commemoration of the great Earthquake in 1689, in which the greater part of the City of Port Royal sunk.

Facility of travelling.—A party of gentlemen from Boston lodged in this town on Friday night last, having performed the following tour, viz:—From Boston, via Albany, to Saratoga Springs, thence by land to Buffalo, thence down the river and the whole length of Lake Ontario, stopping at Oswego, Sackett's Harbor, &c. thence down the St. Lawrence, stopping at Ogdensburg and Montreal, to Quebec, thence over land through the province of Lower Canada, part of Vermont and New Hampshire, by Concord, to Boston. This route, which was by stages and steam boats, and made nearly 1700 miles in 30 days with stops of one day in several places and two days at Quebec, and without any apparent fatigue, displays the astonishing facility of carriage travelling over the country, a great portion of which 20 years ago was a "howling wilderness."

HALL'S PATENT RIFLE:

An instrument that will kill the Sea-Monster.

In consequence of suggestions that the sea-serpent now on our coast is impenetrable by a leaden ball, experiments have been made with one of capt. Hall's patent rifles to ascertain what degree of resistance would be sufficient to stop a ball fired from one of them. The rifle carried a ball weighing half an ounce, and was charged each time with one sixth of an ounce of powder—in the course of the experiments, a carpenter's adze, of common thickness, was shot through, first at a distance of twenty yards and then at a distance of forty yards. A thick narrow axe was deeply indented and broken through between the eye and the steel, from a distance of 20 yards; and a plate of cast iron 3-8s of an inch in thickness, was perforated from a distance of 20 yards, and from a distance of 40 yards. The holes were round and even on the side which the ball entered, and were in diameter about one half larger than the diameter of the balls with which they were made.

The conclusion is irresistible that a ball from one of those rifles would penetrate the serpent, and that as they shoot with extreme accuracy, a good marksman could strike him in any part which he could direct the gun.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

One of the most astonishing examples of the force of perseverance is to be found in the history of Dr. Franklin. The son of a tallow-chandler in Boston, his fame has filled both worlds. As Mirabeau said with such beauty and vivacity; Eripuit cœlo fulmen sceptrumque tyrannis: he snatched thunder from the Heavens, and the sceptre from the hands of tyrants.

Received by the Royal society at London, embraced in the presence of the French Academy by Voltaire, like Socrates embracing Euripides; courted by the grave and the gay; admired by the sage & the fair; piercing the heavens for new secrets to extend the regions of science; and supporting the cause of liberty at the courts of the proudest monarchs; Benjamin Franklin has given to his country one of the greatest names of which Politics and Philosophy can boast. The muse has sung his praise. One of the most eloquent men of the age has pronounced his funeral eulogium in one of the greatest national Assemblies which ever assembled. The greatest philosophers of the time have filled their pages with his discoveries and his praise.

As if to accustom their posterity to his glory, and to teach their children to lisp his name, some of the most popular works that have lately been addressed to the rising generation of England, have brought forward the name of Franklin to their listening auditors. Dr. Aikin, in that excellent work, "Evenings at home;" and Mavon, in his "Parent's Assistant," have paid him this compliment of which he was worthy.—But the greatest of Juvenile benefactors is the celebrated Miss Edgeworth, who in two of her 'Moral Tales,' has introduced his name.

"Forester (says she) most fortunately, about this time, happened to meet with a book, which in some degree counteracted the inflammatory effects of Random's conversation, and which had a happy tendency to sober his enthusiasm, without lessening his propensity to useful exertions.—This book was the life of Dr. Franklin.—The idea that this great man began by being a printer; and whilst he followed him, step by step, through his instructing narrative, Forester sympathised in his feelings, and observed how necessary the smaller virtues of order, economy, industry, and patience, were to Franklin's great character and splendid success."

So also, in the "Good Aunt," she silences a sneerer at the attempt to improve smokey chymnies, by saying, "O, Dr. Franklin's works," interrupted Supine (the sneerer) "I did not see the name before: to be sure I must bow down to that."

Young man! imitate Franklin as Forester did.

CLASSICAL BULLS.

The following samples selected from the works of some of the most popular British writers, will show that bulls are not so peculiar to the Irish as men are apt to think.

Mr. Home, a bonny Caledonian, in his most celebrated drama, has the following goodly yoke—

Beneath a mountain's brow, the most remote
And inaccessible, by shepherds trod.

The river, rushing o'er its pebbled bed,
Imposes silence with a stilly sound.

Mr. Pope says and gravely too,
When first young Maro, in his noble mind,
A work t' outlast immortal Rome design'd.

and again, on an eagle and her young:
Eight callow Infants fill'd the mossy nest,
Herself the ninth

The great historian of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire says

The apology of Tertullian contains two very singular, but at the same time very suspicious circumstances.

Milton himself is not without the same property. He says—

The deeds, themselves though mute,
Spoke loud the doer.
But now lead on,
In me is no delay—with thee to go,
Is to stay here.

In this good company, the author of the Rambler may also be frequently found—For example:

Nor yet perceived the vital spirit fled,
But still fought on, nor knew that he was dead.

Speaking of Shakespeare, he says

Shakespeare has not only shown human nature as it is, but as it would be found in situations to which it cannot be exposed.

In his tour to the Hebrides, the Doctor gravely says

These observations were made by favour of a contrary wind.

Spencer is not behind any of the company in bull making. He tells us

The woods were heard to wail full many a sigh,
And all the birds with silence to complain,

THE LADIES.

A solitary philosopher would imagine ladies blest with an exemption from care and sorrow, lulled in perpetual quiet, & feasted with unmingled pleasure;---for what can interrupt the contentment of those, upon whom one age has labored for another to confer honors and accumulate immunities; to those to whom rudeness is infamy, & insult cowardice; whose eye commands the brave, and whose smiles soften the severe; whom the sailor travels to adorn, the soldier bleeds to defend, and the poet wears out his life to celebrate; who claim tribute from every art and science, and for whom all who approach, endeavour to multiply delights without requiring any return but willingness to be pleased.---Johnson.

Doctor Bossy's Celebrated Elixir of Health.

A medicine, possessing extraordinary powers in arresting the progress, and effectually curing consumption, with all its train of distressing symptoms—a disease which from its frequency, and difficulty of cure within the last three or four years, seems to threaten destruction to a great portion of our population. The author of this medicine is an aged german physician, of great celebrity and acknowledged talents, (residing in the city of London) whose wonderful success in the cure of consumption, has sounded forth his name to the utmost extent of Great Britain.

It is hoped and expected so great a blessing will not long remain untried by the inhabitants of America, whose diseased lungs, with teazing cough, loss of appetite, decay of strength, loss of flesh, pain in the chest, and depression of spirits, warns them of approaching dissolution.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS.

Not to try the means which Providence has placed within our reach, is little less than being our own executioners. It is therefore the duty of every afflicted mortal to seek a remedy in time.

While there is life there is hope!
To-morrow may come too late!!

Dr. Bossy's Hysteric Drops.

A medicine, which has been for many years used with great success, both in Europe and America, speedily removing the most violent fits of Hysterics, like a charm.

Dr. Bossy's Lotion, For burns and scalds.

Slight burns and scalds, if taken immediately will in general be cured by this Liniment. In case of a fever intervening, Epsom salts taken in small quantities, will assist the cure

When the mischief is extensive or deep, mortification may be apprehended, whether the subject be young or old; the advice therefore of a skilful physician or surgeon, should be procured without delay.

Dr. Bossy's Embrocation,

For bruises, strains, inflammations, rheumatism, &c.

A medicine in every respect superior to the common Steer's Opodeldoc, (so universally used) No medicine ever sold has a greater claim on the public than the one now offered; it being a useful external application for sprains, bruises, chilblains, and for dispersing inflammatory tumours, rheumatism, burns scalds, &c.

Dr. Bossy's India Oil,

For the cure of cancers, wens, and all stubborn tumours, &c.

This celebrated Oil, the production of the East Indies, was first discovered by that great, and much celebrated physician of the East Indies, Foi Chi, whose great medical information, has reached the most remote parts of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Russia, and the United States.

Thousands of empyrics and quacks, are daily offering to the world the most deadly poisons, such as Arsenic, muriate of Mercury, Lieuta, &c. in the form of plaisters, Tinctures, Solutions, Pills, &c. thereby destroying the lives of hundreds and thousands of the community.

Infallible Remedy

For destroying Bugs in bedsteads, furniture &c.

This mixture will infallibly destroy them and their nits, though they swarm ever so much. It is necessary that the bed or furniture should be thoroughly wet with it, the dust being first shaken off which will prevent the mixture staining in the least, or soiling even the richest silks, &c. Should any bugs appear after once using this mixture it will be only owing to not having well wetted the linen &c. of the bed with it. So that those parts being well wetted with the liquid, which dries as fast as it is used, and pouring in the joints and holes, where the sponge or brush cannot reach, they never fail of being all destroyed

N. B. It is necessary that the mixture should be well shaken together before it is used.

Balsamic Aromatic Tincture,

Or the grand corrector of flatulence and acidity in the bowels of children.

A medicine so well calculated to relieve the bowel complaint of infant children, (as it is so emphatically called by nurses) that it needs only the trial of a single bottle, to recommend it to the attention of a family.

To alleviate the sufferings of infant children, has called forth the talents of the most eminent physicians of every age, and the want of success appears chiefly to arise from the deeply rooted prejudices of parents and nurses, which the healing art has had to contend with. In this enlightened age much has been done towards banishing ancient prejudices, and we now find children taking food and physic, on much more rational principles than formerly. It is a fact clearly ascertained, that most of the diseases incident to children, do arise from bad management, want of cleanliness. and indigestible food

The medicine here recommended is known to the physicians, for correcting acidity, promoting the digestive powers, warming and invigorating the stomach, and giving immediate ease in the most excruciating pains of the bowels.

The dose to a child a month old is sixty drops—three months old, eighty drops—six months old a tea spoonfull; after which, thirty drops may be added for every year of their age.

The mixture to be well shaken, and mixed with barley water, balm or mint tea, or cold water, and repeated every sixth hour till ease is procured.
